ALBANY, N.Y. — New York will increase the availability of health care to illegal immigrants — and they will no longer have to wait for the governor to act. Gov. Andrew Cuomo made the announcement Saturday, as he released a controversial report on health care in New York. He said the goal is to take New York "one step closer to being the healthiest state in America" by establishing a Medicaid-like health plan for illegal immigrants. The plan is part of Cuomo's "Healthy NY" initiative, designed to reduce the state's mortality rates. His plan would apply to both immigrants in the country legally and those without legal status. "New York will do what it takes to make sure we have health care for everyone in our state," Cuomo said in a news conference. "You cannot be a New Yorker and not have access to health care. The fact that you're not in the country legally is irrelevant." Cuomo was joined by Health Commissioner Nirav Shah and top health officials to make the announcement. New York currently provides health care for nearly 1 million illegal immigrants through federal and state health programs. They must pay out of pocket for medical care. Cuomo made his announcement as he released his plan for expanding health care. It calls for expanding Medicaid to everyone in New York, and also calls for an online exchange where New Yorkers can compare insurance plans and rates. In his proposal, Cuomo would spend $50 million to set up a program that would apply for illegal immigrants in New York, and as many as 2.5 million residents in the state. "We can provide it at a much lower cost, we can get it out faster and we can do it much more quickly, because there is nothing that is more efficient in running a program than when you can be as expansive as possible, and we can expand as many people as possible," Cuomo said. State Comptroller Thomas DiNapoli has said the state's health plan would cost $5.2 billion over 10 years. Cuomo says the state's Medicaid program will cost $13 billion in the current fiscal year, but will cost only $12 billion a year after the new
