Stilbenoid glucosides from Podocarpus macrophyllus with potential neuroprotective activity. A phytochemical study of the stem bark extracts of the Australian endemic subtropical rainforest tree, Podocarpus macrophyllus, provided the isolation of a new hydroxystilbene derivative, the stilbene glucoside, podocarpan glucoside A (1) along with the known stilbenoids, podocarpan glucoside B (2), aryltetralin glucoside (3), cyclooolivil (4), and podocarpin (5). Stilbenoid glycosides 2 and 3, which were previously isolated from woody species of the genus Podocarpus, were isolated from P. macrophyllus for the first time. The structures of the five constituents, identified by 1D and 2D NMR, were confirmed by chemical synthesis. The isolated stilbenoids were evaluated against a panel of neurodegenerative disease models for their potential neurotrophic and neuroprotective activity. Compounds 1-4 were found to be inactive, whereas 5 displayed moderate levels of neurotrophic activity in PC12 cells, with an EC(50) of 11.4 µM.

Animal Crossing: New Leaf was released on the Nintendo 3DS last November and was a hit. The game has over 5.3 million active daily players, surpassing the previous record holder, Super Mario Maker, by around 80,000. Nintendo has also revealed that Animal Crossing: New Leaf has been downloaded over 70 million times since its release. Animal Crossing is a game that most of the people at Nintendo have played and there's no doubt that they play it often,
