Screenshot juvenile localised scleroderma: clinical picture and therapeutic options. The term juvenile localized scleroderma (JLS) covers a subgroup of scleroderma that is recognized to occur in children as young as 2 years old. There are several clinical subtypes of JLS, including the linear scleroderma, kedem-like sclerosis, undifferentiated scleroderma, and craniofacial scleroderma. The linear scleroderma variant is the most common variant and can be localized to the head and neck, trunk, distal extremities, or limbs. The kedem-like sclerosis subtype of JLS is characterized by white markings on the trunk and extremities and is clinically similar to juvenile Dermatomyositis. The undifferentiated scleroderma subtype of JLS is typified by the loss of all skeletal muscle tone and can lead to paralysis, limb contractures, and involvement of the oesophagus. Craniofacial scleroderma involves ocular, oral, and facial tissues and is characterized by eyelid retraction and often enophthalmos. Diagnostic criteria for JLS include arthritis, marked joint contractures, and other evidence of scleroderma such as Raynaud's phenomenon, calcinosis, and marked digital Occ13bf012

COMPROMANTE V5 5.rarLike China's currency, the yuan, official exchanges sell bitcoin on a premium due to its increasing popularity. However, the volume remains low as a direct result of the controls the Chinese government has imposed on the digital currency. China has closed down over 30 exchanges and suspended trading on a further 31. It's not just bitcoin, though. Chinese-regulated digital currency trading platforms ZhaoBao and OKCoin have also stopped trading. However, many Chinese traders turned to peer-to-peer exchange services to purchase bitcoins outside the direct control of the state-controlled exchanges. This has provided some relief, but it's far from a solution. According to Manli Yao, a senior public relations officer at mining giant Bitmain, it's unlikely that the government will allow bitcoin to benefit from these trends. She commented: "I am quite pessimistic about the future of bitcoin in China." The State Administration of Foreign Exchange (SAFE) issued a warning earlier this month that it would arrest anyone involved in bitcoin speculation or trading. Cheng Lei, the CEO of bitcoin China, is not convinced that this will work. He argued that: "I don't think the Chinese government is able to arrest so many people at the same time. A lot of bitcoiners are using VPN to circumvent the ban, but that's a security issue for them and their own safety. If everyone does that, we won't have a community anymore, and a lot of
